When it comes to UConn and Boston College baseball, they are no strangers to the intense competition that occurs and the high-scoring games that go down to the wire when playing one another.

On Wednesday evening, both squads went head-to-head, and the No. 24-ranked Eagles took a win 8-5 in Brighton.

The Huskies led until Boston College scored two runs in the seventh inning, then three more in the seventh to solidify their 28th win of the season.

Julio Solier dominated for the Eagles, racking up two runs batted in on an RBI. Nick Wang, who shone the last time Boston College played UConn, scored four RBIs and a run in five at-bats.

For UConn, Maddix Dalena brought in two runs for his team in four at-bats.

In the first inning, the Huskies struck first with an RBI from Jackson Marshall that brought junior Tyler Minick from first base to home plate.

Then, the Eagles answered back after Wang grounded out, bringing Solier home.

The score was knotted at one until Ty Mainolfi scored off a hit from Jack Toomey to push the score to 2-1 heading into the second inning.

Peyton Jemison tied things up in the top of the second, though, after doubling down the right field line.

Things stayed quiet with the score tied 2-2 until the top of the fourth inning, where Cam Righi doubled down the right field line to bring in an RBI.

The Eagles took the lead 5-3, where Wang, Solier and Maniolfi putting three runs on the board.

In efforts to take their lead back against Boston College, a groundout from Jemison and Polemeni tied the score 5-5 in the top of the seventh inning.

In the bottom of the seventh, Wang notched his 13th home run of the season, racking up two runs on the board.

Then, Toomey reached home again for Boston College to set their win in stone.

Next up, the Huskies will return to Elliot Ballpark to take on St. John's for a three-game weekend series. The first game of the series will take place on Friday at 6:05 p.m., the second game's first pitch will be at 2:05 p.m. And finally, on Sunday, they will start at 1:05 p.m.

If Husky fans can't make it to Storrs, they can tune in to each of these matchups on ESPN+.

The No. 5-seeded University of Connecticut women's tennis team is heading to Cayce, S.C. to take on the No. 4-seeded Georgetown University on Friday to start their Big East Tournament run.

The Huskies last match was against the Seton Hall ended with a 4-3 win last Wednesday.

In doubles play, sophomore Chloe Lomans and junior Ela Platenikova notched a win along with freshman Madison Mcleod and junior Victoria Matos.

In the singles play versus the Pirates, senior Cameron Didion and Lomans both won their matches while junior Isabella Asenov won the day for UConn after winning the last two sets of her match.

That win brought the Huskies to an 11-7 overall record and 4-3 in conference play. One place UConn hasn't struggled is at home, where they have a 6-1 record, but UConn has struggled away from Storrs, where they have a 4-6 record. In neutral sites, they have a 1-0 record this season.

In doubles play over the season, Asenov and Didion have the most wins with seven, but they also have the most losses with six. Over the season, only one pairing had zero losses when playing together. Lomans and Mcleod have an overall record of 5-0 but Lomans and Platenikova plus Matos and Mcleod only have one loss when paired together.

In singles play over the course of the season, Didion and Lomans have the best record with 12 wins and four losses with Asenov not far behind with a record of 11-5. Platenikova, Mcleod and Matos all have records below .500 with Matos and Platenikova having the most wins out of the trio with seven.

Freshman Ilana Rosenthal started one singles match over the entire season versus the University of Massachusetts, which she won.

Georgetown is coming into the matchup vs UConn as the favorites. Georgetown has a record of 8-8 overall and a 4-2 record in conference play.

The Hoyas beat the Huskies in their last matchup on April 2, 4-3. In their past 10 matches, UConn has a record of 3-7 against Georgetown. Georgetown is on a four-match win streak.

UConn will play Georgetown on Friday at 1 p.m.
