Parting With Your Parents' Belongings

It can be painful and daunting to remove a deceased parent's belongings from their home. Reminders of their life and presence are everywhere, and even throwing away unwanted items like medications can be challenging. Experts recommend forming a plan before starting by asking yourself some important questions: do I want help from others, are there items to set aside for others, and how much time am I willing or able to spend? Beginning with a smaller goal—like removing items you know you don't like or want—can increase you muscle memory and motivation to tackle harder tasks. And by necessity you may have to start with something like their office and files in order to properly settle the estate.

There is no shortage of places where your loved one's possessions can help others. Locally there are places of worship, homeless shelters, thrift stores, community outreach centers, residential treatment programs, hospice, charities, and places for the homeless and victims of domestic violence that would welcome your donations. We are always prepared to respond to your needs quickly and competently. To learn more about the funeral services at our funeral home, please call 203-239-1179. We are located at 36 Washington Avenue.

Quote: "Earthly possessions dazzle our eyes and delude us into thinking that they can provide security and freedom from anxiety. Yet all the time they are the very source of anxiety."
Dietrich Bonhoeffer
