A Century of Conservation: Join the Celebration of Sleeping Giant State Park's 100th Anniversary!

The Sleeping Park Association proudly invites the community to join a historic celebration marking the 100th anniversary of Sleeping Giant State Park on Saturday, October 12, from 10am-4pm, at the State Park (raindate Oct. 13). This beloved landmark, which has stood as a testament to conservation and outdoor enjoyment, will commemorate its centennial on October 12, 2024 -- exactly 100 years to the day since its gates first opened to the public.

A Centennial of Partnership in Preservation. Sleeping Giant State Park's story is deeply intertwined with the formation and ongoing efforts of Sleeping Giant Park Association (SGPA). The park was established in 1924 after SGPA, led by conservationists like Yale forestry professor James W. Toumey, was founded with the goal of acquiring land on the Sleeping Giant to create a protected public park. SGPA's work was crucial in purchasing and accepting gifts of land that comprised the original footprint of the park.

Just a few years later, SGPA found itself at the forefront of a battle to protect the mountain's most recognizable feature -- the Giant's head. In the 1920s, quarrying operations were rapidly expanding, threatening to permanently alter the silhouette of the Sleeping Giant. SGPA, led by its second president, Arnold Dana, fought a lengthy legal battle to stop the quarrying, eventually securing the protection of the Giant's head in 1933. This victory solidified the Giant's place as both a regional landmark and a testament to the power of local conservation efforts.

A century later, SGPA remains a vital partner to the park, helping maintain trails, offering educational hikes, and advocating for the continued protection of the Giant.

A Day to Celebrate the Past and Look to the Future. The centennial event will reflect on this rich history, while also celebrating the park's future as a haven for outdoor recreation and education. The day begins at 10am with remarks from elected and appointed officials, SGPA representatives, and local Indigenous leaders, recognizing the park's legacy and its importance to the region.

From 11am-4pm, attendees will enjoy a wide range of activities:

- Guided hikes of varying difficulty, through the park's 32 miles of trails, led by SGPA.
- Beer Garden featuring a special centennial brew from Counterweight Brewing Company.
- High-Angle Rescue Demonstration by the Hamden Fire Department, highlighting cliffside rescue techniques at the park's historic quarry.
- Food trucks, community partner tables, and centennial merchandise will round out the celebration, with proceeds supporting SGPA's continued efforts to preserve the park.

The Giant's Legacy: A Landmark of History and Nature. The creation of Sleeping Giant State Park and the formation of SGPA have protected not only the natural beauty of the land but also cultural significance. For centuries, the land was a spiritual home for the Quinnipiac people, who revered the Giant as the resting place of the spirit Hobbomock. Today, the park honors this ancient heritage while offering a place of recreation and renewal for all.

Join Us for a Historic Celebration. Whether you're a longtime supporter of Sleeping Giant or experiencing it for the first time, this event promises something for everyone. From learning about the park's fascinating history to enjoying its trails and family-friendly activities, it's a day to celebrate a century of outdoor exploration and conservation.
