

Buzzathon raises funds for children’s camp

Lily Rand
Photo Editor

On Oct. 15, Alpha Sigma Alpha Sorority hosted its annual Buzzathon fundraiser on the Buley Library patio to support Camp Rising Sun, a summer program for children who have been diagnosed with cancer and their siblings. The event offered haircuts by student stylists from the Shear Brilliance Institute and temporary henna tattoos for $5 each. Attendees could also purchase raffle tickets for $1 each, entering to win themed baskets filled with self-care items, fuzzy blankets, snacks, drinks and men’s grooming products. All proceeds went to Camp Rising Sun, located in Colebrook, Connecticut. The camp provides a supportive environment for children affected by cancer, whether they are in treatment, in remission or in any stage of recovery. Buzzathon reflects Alpha Sigma Alpha’s ongoing commitment to community engagement and raising awareness for childhood cancer.

Photos: Lily Rand

Exercise and sport science major Brooklyn Jepson, a junior, holding up the event sign.

Sport management major Sofian Goufal, a sophomore, getting his haircut.

Henna temporary tattoos on students’ hands.

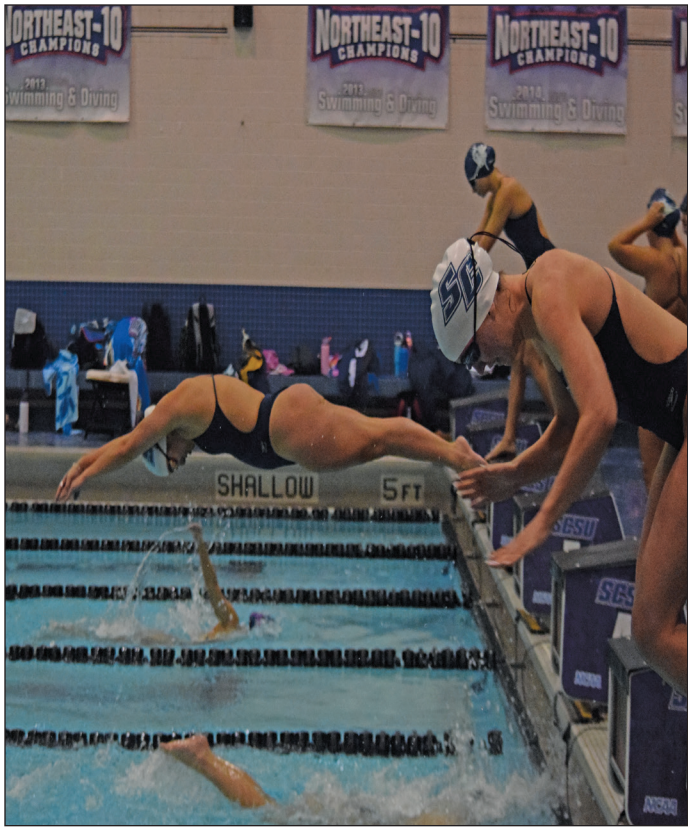

Baskets full of goodies including self-care products, fuzzy blanket and snacks for raffle prizes.

Nursing major Ella Royea, a freshman, physical education PK-12 major Elizabeth Lamond and health science major Brianna Otto, juniors, and special education K-12 major Julia Silver, a sophomore, holding up fundraiser signs with catchy phrases.

Swimming and diving teams athletes in action

Women’s swimming and diving team diving into the water.

Swimmer Vincent Roney, a sophomore, looking at the bleachers after a swim.

Lily Rand
Photo Editor

On Saturday, Oct. 18, the men’s and women’s swimming and diving teams competed in a home meet featuring a full lineup of individual and relay events. Swimmers raced in freestyle, backstroke, breaststroke and butterfly, while divers showcased routines from both the one-meter and three-meter boards. The meet highlighted the team’s speed, stamina and technical skill, with strong performances across the board. Teammates and coaches lined the deck, cheering on athletes as they pushed through heats and executed dives with precision.

Photos: Wade Barillaro

School spirit banner hanging over the pool to support the swimmers.

Swimmer Sara Roney, a junior, cheering on her teammates.

Men’s swimming and diving team swimmers lined up on the starting platform.

Swimmer Molly Kennedy, a junior, swimming breaststroke.