BULLETIN

This Day in Yale History, 1988

March 3, 1988 / Basketball shares Ivy League Title

By Jeremy Licht

A 39-year title drought ended last night as the men's basketball team claimed a share of the 2002 Ivy League championship

With Princeton's 64-48 loss to Pennsylvania, Yale (19-9, 11-3 Ivy) moved into the first three-way tie for the championship in league history, joining the Tigers and the Quakers atop the conference. Not only did the Penn win end nearly four decades of Eli frustration, it also highlighted the turnaround engineered by Yale head coach James Jones, who in three years has taken a cellar dweller to the league's pinnacle.

THOMAS SULLIVAN/CONTRIBUTING PHOTOGRAPHER
Members of the Yale men's basketball team celebrated in the John J. Lee Amphitheater Tuesday night after earning a share of the Ivy League championship. It was Yale's first conference championship in 39 years.

Behind the Headline

By Elijah Hurewitz-Ravitch

A discussion in my social theory class had just wrapped — we were comparing how Mandeville, Smith and Kant saw the relationship between ends and means in public life — when I hopped in an Uber to talk to someone who seems to consider these questions daily.

I was headed to the Dixwell Community House, or Q House, a pillar of the Dixwell neighborhood, to talk to Henry Fernandez LAW '94. Fernandez is representing New Haven in negotiations with Yale over the University's annual voluntary payment to the city. He's a true behind-the-scenes operator, and currently straddles the town-gown divide that has so long been a point of contention around these parts.

Our conversation was wide-ranging — we talked about local journalism, car-buying techniques and that school up in Cambridge. New Haven's spokesperson announced that a new "commitment and plan to support the city's finances" is set to be disclosed Friday morning. I encourage you to give my profile a read and learn a little bit about New Haven's negotiator-in-chief.

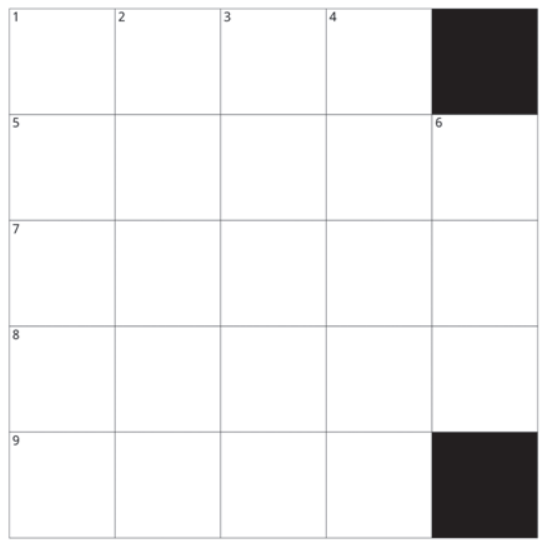

Read "Negotiator at center of town and gown" on page 1.

Puzzles

Puzzle by Ariana Borut '27

ACROSS
1 Vacation plan
5 Pack again, as groceries
7 Skirt style
8 In a mental fog
9 Midterm, e.g.

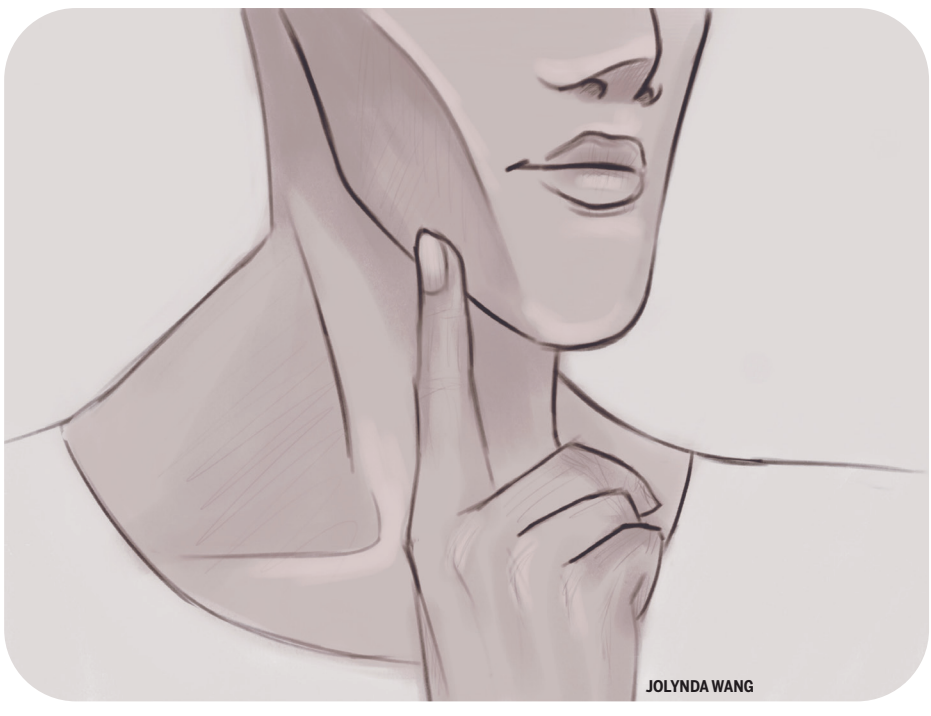

DOWN
1 Make a swap
2 Enjoy some downtime
3 Spanish island known for its party scene
4 Fictional nation in "The Hunger Games"
6 H.S. equivalency test

MAIA WILSON

JOLYNDA WANG

